Biographical Sketch

Henry Hurwitz was born July 14, 1886, in a small village in Lithuania (about twenty miles from the capital city of Kovno). His family immigrated to the United States in 1891, and he attended Boston and Gloucester, Massachusetts public schools, graduating in 1904 as valedictorian of Gloucester High School. He received his B.A. from Harvard in 1908 and continued his education at the Harvard Law and Business School obtaining an M.A. in 1911, with a specialty in diplomacy and international law. While at Harvard, Hurwitz was elected to Phi Beta Kappa in his junior year, twice won the Coolidge Boylson and Summer prize in debating, oratory and essay, and was captain of the Harvard Inter-varsity debates against Yale and Princeton.

In 1906, Hurwitz and several other Jewish students at Harvard (including Horace M. Kallen and Abraham Simon) met and organized the Harvard Menorah Society for the Study and Advancement of Jewish Culture and Ideals. After receiving his master's degree, Hurwitz continued with the promotion of the Menorah idea and in 1913 helped to establish the Intercollegiate Menorah Association (IMA) which expanded the objectives of the Harvard Menorah Society to a national scale.

Henry Hurwitz served as president of the IMA until 1914 when the constitution was amended to include the office of chancellor, a position which Hurwitz was to retain throughout his career. As Chancellor, Hurwitz undertook the direction of fund-raising activities, the promotion of Menorah societies throughout the country, and the initiation and implementation of the many Menorah-sponsored activities such as the Menorah Board of Lecturers, the Menorah Summer School, and the Menorah Educational Conference.

In 1915, the IMA founded the bi-monthly Menorah Journal with Hurwitz as editor-in-chief. The Menorah Journal was designed to fulfill two purposes: first, to serve as the official organ of the Association; and, second, to serve as the academic exponent of Jewish culture and ideals in America. Through the publication of the best and most informative articles produced in Jewish history, religion, literature, and modern life, the Journal aimed to stimulate an awareness of an interest in Jewish issues, to discuss Jewish problems from all points of view, and to encourage Jewish writers and artists to find themselves within their Jewish heritage.

The first issue was brought out in January 1915 with Louis Brandeis contributing the leading article, "A Call to the Educated Jew," and with greetings from such notables as David Philipson, Stephen S. Wise, Cyrus Adler and Kaufmann Kohler [1]. The editorial statement of this issue described the aims and aspirations of the Journal: "Scholarly when scholarship will be in order, but always endeavoring to be timely, vivacious, readable; keen in the pursuit of truth wherever its source and whatever the consequences; a Jewish forum open to all sides, devoted first and last to bringing out the values of Jewish culture and ideals, of Hebraism and of Judaism and striving for their advancement..." [2]

In 1917, due to the increase in the number of Menorah societies and the continued need for a scholarly Jewish periodical, The Menorah Bulletin was created to take over as the organ of the IMA, leaving The Menorah Journal to serve solely as the exponent of Jewish culture and ideals.

In 1924, a Menorah Writers' and Artists' Fund was established to sustain The Menorah Journal as the medium for publishing the writings of Jewish thinkers and artists. With the rise of Nazism in the 1930's, the Journal further enamored itself with Jewish audiences by publishing contributions written by many refugee writers and artists.

The Journal was not, however, without its controversies. The debate over the publication of A.H. Silver's 1926 article "Why do the Heathen Rage?" caused the Journal to be criticized as anti-rabbinical and anti-reformist. Elliot E. Cohen and several other editors resigned in 1930 due to a policy conflict. And, Oscar I. Janowsky's "Zionism Today: A Clarification" (1944), along with Hurwitz's participation in the American Council for Judaism in the 1950s caused the Journal to be labeled Zionist and anti-Zionist respectively.

The Menorah Journal remained bi-monthly through 1927 when, for four years, it was published monthly. In 1931, due to financial difficulties caused both by the depression and an ideological change within American Jewry, the Journal was reduced to a quarterly and continued to be published erratically as such until Henry Hurwitz's death in 1961. A Valedictory Issue, dedicated to Henry Hurwitz, was published in 1962. In 1963, The Menorah Journal was officially ended with the dissolution of the Menorah Association, Inc. along with its subsidiary Menorah Journal, Inc.

In 1928, Henry Hurwitz helped to organize the Federation of Lithuanian Jews of America. The major purpose of this organization as stated in its draft constitution was "to extend aid to the Jews of Lithuania economically and culturally, and in such other ways as may be deemed desirable from time-to-time." [3] The Federation also hoped to build a bridge between American Jews of Lithuanian descent and their kinsmen in Lithuania and thus establish a type of cultural exchange for the benefit of both. Hurwitz was elected as the first president of the Federation, a position which he held through 1936.

Henry Hurwitz also participated in various other organizations including the American Jewish Congress, the World Union of Jewish Students (of which he was president in 1929), and the Overseas Press Club. But these activities were only secondary to his dedication to the promotion of the Menorah ideal and the publication of The Menorah Journal.

Circa 1918, Henry Hurwitz married Ruth Sapinsky (pen name Ruth Sapin), a native of New Albany, Indiana. Ruth Sapin Hurwitz wrote short stories and articles on educational and welfare topics for The Menorah Journal and collaborated frequently with her husband in Menorah activities. She died in June 1961. The Hurwitz's had two sons: Henry Hurwitz, Jr. (1919-1992) and David L. Hurwood (1922-2006). Henry Hurwitz died on November 19, 1961, in New York City.

The IMA file consists primarily of materials concerning individual campus Menorah societies. The collection was presented as two separate files and their arrangement has been left as such.

Arrangement

Organized into two (2) series: A. Henry Hurwitz Papers; B. Intercollegiate Menorah Association Records.

Index Terms

Subjects Jewish college students / Jewish periodicals / The Menorah journal
Personal Names Hurwitz, Henry, 1886-1961

Series A. Henry Hurwitz Papers, 1905-1963

Extent 26.4 linear feet (66 Hollinger boxes)

Scope and Content Note The majority of the material is from 1915, the beginning of The Menorah Journal, through 1961, the year of Henry Hurwitz's death. The material in the file after Mr. Hurwitz's death is his son's (David Hurwood) correspondence concerning his father.

Arrangement Arranged in two (2) subseries: 1. General Files; 2. Financial Records.

Subseries 1. General Files, 1905-1963

Extent 25.8 linear feet (64.5 Hollinger boxes)

Scope and Content Note Contains correspondence, manuscripts, galley proofs, clippings, pamphlets, and other nearprint material. There are some corporate headings in this Series, but generally, correspondence with institutions, committees and organizations is filed under the personal name of Hurwitz's major correspondent within the organization. The general folders at the beginning of each letter of the alphabet contain the correspondence, manuscripts, etc. of those individuals for whom there are less than three items.

The correspondence in the General File is rich in materials documenting the Menorah movement as a whole as well as many of the individual activities which it sponsored. Henry Hurwitz, as Chancellor of the IMA/MA, assumed the responsibility for the creation, promotion, and funding of Menorah activities. Through his correspondence one can see the development, management, and at times the demise, of many of these projects. A great deal of the correspondence also concerns attempts to secure membership dues, and grants and donations from various individuals and organizations.

Series A also contains much material concerning the publication of The Menorah Journal. Henry Hurwitz, as editor-in-chief, screened many of the manuscripts submitted, edited many of those accepted for publication, and solicited articles from prominent scholars and notable people in the Jewish community. Often he asked for outside opinions on the value of a particular manuscript and at times he provided advice for the use of a manuscript elsewhere. The correspondence in this Series shows these functions of the editor-in-chief while also containing many of the original manuscripts and drafts of articles published in the Journal. The editorial policies of The Menorah Journal are not well documented, probably because there was little need for outside correspondence concerning them, but some controversies in which the Journal was involved did warrant outside correspondence and they often reflect general editorial policies.

Hurwitz's interests outside of the Menorah movement were few. He was involved in the founding and management of the Federation of Lithuanian Jews of America and he did join and participate in other organizations and committees, but often this was only to further the Menorah cause. Series A contains material on some of these organizations, especially the Federation of Lithuanian Jews in America.

Very little information on Hurwitz's personal life is found in the Henry Hurwitz subgroup. His correspondence with his sons, Henry, Jr. and David, and with some personal friends, while at times illuminating, is not voluminous. Many of his personal activities and opinions are to be seen only in snatches through his correspondence with individuals concerned with the movement.

Arrangement Alphabetical. Within each individual file, the material is chronologically arranged, with any manuscripts and galley proofs following the correspondence and other material.
