Administrative Information

Biographical Sketch	Samuel Untermeyer was born in Lynchburg, Virginia, on March 2, 1858. His parents were Isidore and Therese Untermeyer. Samuel was raised and educated in New York City, earning an LL.B. from Columbia Law School in 1878. After admission to the bar Untermeyer entered law practice in the prestigious firm of Guggenheimer &amp; Untermeyer, later Guggenheimer, Untermeyer &amp; Marshall. His legal practice was varied, including corporate, civil, criminal, labor, family and international law. He achieved distinction and success early in his legal career, serving as counsel for many important cases. In addition to work in the courts, Untermeyer was often engaged as an adviser for great financial transactions. He remained in active practice for 61 years, until his death in 1940. In 1912 Untermeyer received national prominence as counsel for the Money Trust Inquiry of the Committee on Banking and Currency of the House of Representatives. The committee, known as the Pujo Committee (named for its chairman), investigated financial conditions with the purpose of presenting remedial legislation. As a result of this and other inquiries, the Federal Reserve Act, the Federal Trade Commission Act and other measures designed to curb financial excesses were either enacted or amended. Untermeyer took a large part in drafting or presenting this legislation. In behalf of Jewish rights, Untermeyer served as attorney for Herman Bernstein's suit against Henry Ford for anti-semitic articles published in Ford's Dearborn Independent. After the advent of Hitlerism, Untermeyer became president of the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League to Champion Human Rights, to counter Nazi propaganda and lead in the boycott of German goods. Other activity in the Jewish community included serving as vice-president of the American Jewish Congress until 1926 and president of the Palestine Foundation Fund for several years. Untermeyer was a prominent member of the Democratic Party and was a delegate to six Democratic Conventions from 1904-1932. He had considerable influence on Democratic political affairs, especially in New York City. Untermeyer married Minnie Karl (died August 1, 1924) on August 9, 1880. They had three children: Alvin, Irwin, and Irene (Mrs. Stanley L. Richter). Samuel Untermeyer died in Palm Springs, California, March 16, 1940.
