Biographical Sketch

Horace M. Kallen was born in Berenstadt, Silesia, Germany, in 1882 and immigrated to Boston with his family at the age of five. He was the son of Jacob David Kallen, a Hebrew scholar and Orthodox rabbi, and the former Esther Glazier. Kallen had six sisters (Ida, Dora, Mildred, Deborah, Frances, and Miriam) and one brother (Leo).

Kallen attended Harvard University, graduating in 1903. He went to Princeton where he taught English from 1903 until 1905 at which time he was dismissed for being an avowed unbeliever. Originally interested in writing novels and poetry, he became more interested in philosophy and the philosophical implications of the arts and the social sciences. He credited George Santayana, William James, Edwin Holt, Canning Schiller, Barrett Wendell and Solomon Schechter as most influential in the development of his philosophical ideas. Although he refused to be tied to a specific philosophical school, he can be most closely identified with the broad pragmatic philosophy of John Dewey and F.C.S. Schiller.

After studying philosophy at Oxford University and the Paris-Sorbonne University, Kallen returned to Harvard and received his Ph.D. in 1908. He taught philosophy at Harvard and logic at Clark College (1910) until he received an instructorship at the University of Wisconsin in 1911. He continued in this post until 1918 at which time he was forced to resign because of his support of the rights of pacifists in the heat of World War I. This incident increased his belief in the necessity of intellectual freedom and the right to speak out on controversial issues.

Dr. Kallen's association with the New School for Social Research marks the longest and most productive period of his life. In 1919, together with James Harvey Robison, Charles A. Beard, Thorstien Veblen, Alvin Johnson and Robert Bruerre, he founded the New School for Social Research in New York City. The institution was founded as a kind of refugee camp for America's intellectuals and academics in the wake of World War I amid fears concerning academic and intellectual freedom. As the last of the original founders, Dr. Kallen taught his final course in the fall of 1973. While at the New School he also taught courses at Harvard, Columbia, the University of Wisconsin, Ohio State University and Claremont College (California).

Horace Kallen was the author of more than thirty books as well as numerous pamphlets and articles. He was active in liberal, educational and Zionist movements. He wrote on consumerism and environmental control long before they became major topics. He was an outstanding leader in the adult education movement in America.

He was close to casting aside his Jewish identity when Barrett Wendell, professor of English literature at Harvard, "showed how the Old Testament had affected the Puritan mind and traced the role of Hebraic tradition in the development of the American character."^[1] As a result, Kallen turned Zionist in 1902. He argued strongly for 60 years that the Jewish people needed a homeland in Palestine to protect them against persecution and to enhance their Jewish cultural heritage.

Dr. Kallen was an active member of the Jewish community working in and with such organizations as the American Jewish Congress, the American Association for Jewish Education, of which he was vice-president, and the YIVO Institute for Jewish Research. He served on many government committees, including the Presidential Commission on Higher Education, and the New York City Commission on Intergroup Relations (1961). Also, he was active in such organizations as the International League for the Rights of Man and the Society for the Scientific Study of Religion.

His philosophy has been characterized as Hebraism, aesthetic pragmatism, humanism, cultural pluralism, and cooperative individualism. A major precept of his philosophy was: "I have a right to believe what you believe is wrong. If in your eyes I am wrong, yet I have that right to be wrong, and that right is unalienable." [sic]^[2]

Kallen's concept of cultural pluralism affirmed that each ethnic and cultural group in the United States had a unique contribution to make to the variety and richness of American culture, and thus provided a rationale for those Jews who wish to preserve their Jewish cultural identity in the American melting pot.

Dr. Kallen's more well-known writings include, The Book of Job as a Greek Tragedy (1918); Zionism and World Politics (1921); Judaism at Bay (1932); Individualism: An American Way of Life (1933); The Decline and Rise of the Consumer (1936); Art and Freedom (2 vol. 1942); The Education of Free Men (1949); Of Them Which Say They Are Jews (1954, edited by Judah Pilch, a collection of Kallen's essays on the Jewish struggle for survival); Utopians at Bay (1958) on his impressions of Israel; and Liberty, Laughter and Tears (1968).

Horace Kallen was married to the former Rachel Oatman Van Arsdale. They had two children, Harriet S. Haines and David J. Kallen, and six grandchildren.

Scope and Content

The papers of the educator and philosopher, Horace M. Kallen, contain materials relating to his long career and interest in philosophy, humanism, religion, civil rights, consumerism, education, and Zionism. The collection includes correspondence, manuscripts, newsclippings, reports, papers, speeches, printed and miscellaneous materials. The Papers span the period 1902 to 1975 with the bulk of the material occurring prior to 1921 and after 1940. The gap in the Kallen Collection for the 1920s and 1930s is a result of the donation of a large segment of his papers in 1954 to the YIVO Institute for Jewish Research.

Provenance

The Horace M. Kallen papers were donated by Dr. Kallen, and, after his death, by his wife, Rachel Kallen. The papers were received by the American Jewish Archives in many segments over an eighteen year period from 1963 to 1980. In 1998 the Archives received an additional supplement of materials from Dr. Sarah Schmidt on behalf of Kallen's daughter, Harriet Kallen Haines. This material, consisting of letters from Dr. and Mrs. Kallen to Mrs. Haines, covers the years 1930-1978. In 1998, the Archives also received the letters and papers of Miriam Kallen [sister], donated by Kallen's son, David Kallen.
